The Workplace in 2030

Our experts look to the future...

Thursday 23rd September 2021
9.00 - 10.00am

Workplace change is already happening.

Hybrid working, collaborative spaces and activity-based work environments are not distant concepts; they're here, right now.

Will the pace of change continue to accelerate and if so, what will the world of work and the role of the workplace look like a decade from now?

Should we prepare for a future that is radically different? Or will tomorrow's place of work be just a few short steps away from where it is today?

Join us and a panel of workplace experts as we take a closer look at the latest industry research and some standout workplace projects that may tell us more about what lies ahead.

HANNAH NARDINI

WK Space

Hannah will consider the role of the workplace as a collaborative meeting space. She will discuss the way we work now and whether the office of the future will require any desk space at all.

BERTIE VAN WYK

Herman Miller

Bertie will share research carried out on behalf of the UK Government by The Workplace Intelligence Unit, which was founded by Herman Miller. He will look at 3 possible future scenarios established by the Government's Foresight Team, and look at what work could be like under those scenarios.

CLAIRE STANT

Office Principles

Claire designed a new state-of-the-art HQ for fast-growing retailer, Lounge Underwear. Hear her thoughts on hybrid working and why Lounge is flying in the face of convention.
